

Highlights of French Attitudes on Climate Change, Carbon Taxation and Other Climate Policies

- French people have limited knowledge about climate change but worry about it.
- They prefer green investments or regulations to a tax and dividend.
- Distributive effects and lack of alternatives prevent carbon tax acceptance.
- Improving knowledge is predicted to increase ecological attitudes and concern.
- Unlike in the US, partisanship does not interact with education to shape perceptions.